ABOUT KATRINA KELLY

Combining antique and classical artisanship with modern and elegant designs, Katrina Kelly is reforming the way we think about high-end jewelry in her debut collection Katrina Kelly Jewelry that goes back to jewelry's roots. It is delicate and feminine with an old world flair.

Katrina creates beautiful, enchanting pieces for strong women with discerning tastes. As a woman, she understands what we ladies want and desire. She designs heirlooms for the women of today. Her education and work experience in fine art lead us to her graceful entry into the fine jewelry world. She earned her BFA in Metalsmithing and Jewelry Design while receiving hands-on experience at a fine Turkish jewelry company. After college Katrina continued her artistic quest for inspiration and knowledge by traveling abroad throughout Europe. She was then invited to Istanbul, Turkey, the corporate headquarters of the Turkish jewelry company that employed her in the United States. It was a life changing experience for her. She was able to meet their designers and see the manufacturing headquarters. This gave her a better understanding of jewelry's allure, its beautiful rich history and ancient techniques.

After a short stint back in the States, Katrina yearned for more classical training and education so she returned to Europe where she embarked upon an intense jewelry design program in Florence, Italy to hone her skills in the areas of gem setting and design. She became well versed in early and modern techniques for constructing and manipulating metal to form treasures with her own hands.

When the studies in Italy were completed, Katrina returned to the states. She worked as a bench jeweler before shifting gears to spend seven years working at her family's financial company. This rigorous and lucrative experience was one that taught her how to run a business. During this time, she launched a few small jewelry collections, which sold to private collectors. By continuing to create jewelry, she kept developing and fine-tuning her signature style.

Katrina took a leap of faith recently to pursue her passion fulltime. Her experience in finance, and hands on experience as a bench jeweler empowers Katrina to oversee the company and all its production in a meticulous and scrupulous manner.

Katrina Kelly's collection takes elements from her diverse experiences and creates a style all her own. Her strongest influence derives from her travels to Europe and Turkey, her love of the undulating and rich curves from the Ottoman, Baroque and Art Nouveau periods. The line embodies modern design, classic artisanship and everyday elegance.
